

NOTES ON CONTRIBUTORS

Dr Stephanie J. Snow is a research fellow at the Wellcome Unit for the History of Medicine at Manchester University. Her PhD thesis concentrated on the life and work of John Snow. She is now writing a book on the professionalisation of medicine in the nineteenth century, covering such issues as science, ethics and medical practice.

W.A. (Bill) Jackson is a retired pharmacist and a past president of the British Society for the History of Pharmacy, which in 1998 awarded him the Leslie Matthews Medal. Author of a number of publications in medical and pharmaceutical history and antiques, he is currently Honorary Curator of Collections at Manchester University Medical School Museum.

Emeritus Professor P.E.H. Hair is a past chairman of the society and a past president of the Hakluyt Society.

Dr S. Tharakaram is a consultant dermatologist at the Dudley Group of Hospitals NHS Trust, Wordsley Hospital, in Stourbridge. Qualifying in Madras, he then worked in the wards where Donovan was the second physician. His interests in the history of medicine include the contributions of the colonial Indian Medical Service and matters relating to the historical aspects of dermatology and venereology.
